Questions loom about attack's cost

Reuters

WASHINGTON President Obama's decision to join Western intervention in Libya is raising concerns about the cost and duration of the military operation.

Even if the U.S. role in Libya remains limited, the effort will add to record-high debt and deficits that have led to a budget standoff between Republicans and Obama's Democrats.

"It's a strange time in which almost all of our congressional days are spent talking about budget, deficits, outrageous problems and yet at the same time all of this passes," said Richard Lugar, the top Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Lugar, a senior lawmaker who has been in sync with Obama on many foreign affairs issues, told CBS's "Face the Nation" that he understood the mission was to stop the "cruelties and the murder" of civilians in Libya.

But he said he worried that the Libya intervention could draw the U.S. more deeply into the unrest in the Middle East than the Obama administration intends.

The Libyan intervention marks a third military operation in a Muslim country, with the U.S. armed services' resources already stretched thin by the Iraq and Afghanistan wars.

Until last week, Obama himself had been reluctant to support calls by France and Britain for a no-fly zone over Libya because of concerns about its effectiveness and wariness over where it might lead.

With troops in Iraq and Afghanistan, the U.S. now is fighting three conflicts while struggling under a huge budget deficit and national debt.

The Pentagon also has plans to cut $78 billion in defense spending over five years.

A show of force

Arab support in doubt as U.S., allies begin bombing raids on Libya

Reuters

TRIPOLI Western forces pounded Libya's air defenses and patrolled its skies Sunday, but their day-old intervention hit a diplomatic setback as the Arab League chief condemned the "bombardment of civilians."

As European and U.S. forces unleashed warplanes and cruise missiles against Moammar Gadhafi's air defenses and armor, the Libyan leader said the airstrikes amounted to terrorism and vowed to fight to the death.

Later, however, a Libyan armed forces spokesman stated at a live news conference that the army was ordering all troops to cease fire immediately.

This statement drew no immediate response from Western powers, who had blamed Gadhafi's government for breaking a unilateral cease-fire it announced last week.

The military intervention had forced Gadhafi's eastern forces to flee from the outskirts of Benghazi in the face of the allied air attacks.

However, tanks also moved into Misrata, the last rebel-held city in western Libya. Among the densely packed houses full of civilians, they were less vulnerable to attack from the air.

A Libyan government health official said 64 people had been killed in the Western bombardment overnight, but it was impossible to verify the report as government minders refused to take reporters in Tripoli to the sites of the bombings.

Arab League chief Amr Moussa called for an emergency meeting of the group of 22 states to discuss Libya. He requested a report into the bombardment, which he said had "led to the deaths and injuries of many Libyan civilians."

"What is happening in Libya differs from the aim of imposing a no-fly zone, and what we want is the protection of civilians and not the bombardment of more civilians," Egypt's state news agency quoted Moussa as saying.

Arab backing for a no-fly zone provided crucial underpinning for the passage of a U.N. Security Council resolution last week that paved the way for Western action to stop Gadhafi killing civilians as he fights an uprising against his rule.

Withdrawal of Arab support would make it much harder to pursue what some defense analysts say could in any case be a difficult, open-ended campaign with an uncertain outcome.

Britain and the U.S. rebuffed Moussa's comments.

A senior U.S. official said a U.N. resolution endorsed by Arab states covered "all necessary measures" to protect civilians, "which we made very clear includes, but goes beyond, a no-fly zone."

TWEET OF THE WEEK

Speaking of celebrities who tweet without thinking, here's this gem from 2008.

» @ParisHilton
No, no. I didn't go to England; I went to London.

Tragedy brings out worst on Twitter

Tragedy is no time for self-promotion.

I'm paratweeting here (my word of the week), but if I see another tweet like "I'll donate money to Japan fund for each new follower I get," I'm going to SCREAM—and not just in caps lock in my mind.

You might think it makes sense to try to increase followers and disguise it as doing a good deed, but that's not how it comes across. Every one of those tweets sounds desperate and pathetic.

The response was swift and angry when Microsoft did it.

"How you can #SupportJapan-For every retweet, bing will give $1 to Japan quake victims, up to $100K."

Ouch. Where's the untweet button when you need one?

The Internet nearly exploded in rage after that Microsoft tweet went up. How could a company as big as Microsoft—a company known for philanthropy—tie the ongoing quest for retweets to charity? Bing later apologized, saying it was trying to provide an easy way for people to help. Sorry, but that idea was as half-baked as a bad soufflé.

People with huge followings can never lose sight of how much influence they have. When you tweet, think about your audience.

Gilbert Gottfried lost his job last week as the voice of the iconic Aflac duck when he tweeted insensitive jokes about the earthquake and tsunami. Rapper 50 Cent somehow managed to tie his "hoes" with the tsunami evacuation.

And this isn't the first time celebs and corporations have tried to capitalize on an international crisis. Remember this classic tweet sent out during the Egypt revolution?

"Millions are in uproar in #Cairo. Rumor is they heard our new spring collection is now available online at <http://bit.ly/KCairo-KC>"

Let's hope Kenneth Cole learned a valuable lesson. Maybe the moral of the past week's Twitter screw-ups is simply to think before you tweet. Here are three suggestions:

» Use search to help. With Japan, I did a simple Twitter search and looked for charities offering ways to donate. I ended up retweeting the Red Cross text campaign in which you can donate $10 via cell phone.

» If you run multiple accounts, there's no excuse for confusing them. Ever. An employee for a social media agency—who was fired, by the way—dropped the F-word on Chrysler's account earlier this month.

» Proofread. At the very least, you might save yourself some embarrassment.

What's your advice for people who leave their mark on Twitter for all the wrong reasons? Tweet me, poke me—just tell me. Use caution.

Red dress

The look: Bright, bold colors. Have fun with color this season, Lucky magazine's Jen Ford said. "It's an instant mood changer," she said. Experiment with different color combinations. Mix and clash colors such as a yellow blouse with a fuchsia pencil skirt, she said. Or put two shades of the same color together—plum and lavender, for instance. Wear the color that best complements your skin tone closest to your face. You can rock the trend with a handbag in a great color too.

COLOR! METALLICS! PLAID! THE INSIDE SCOOP ON SPRING'S MUST-HAVE STYLES

By Leonor Vivanco

REDEYE

Get ready to ditch that puffy, goose-down winter coat. Spring is here. The season officially started Sunday, so say goodbye to turtlenecks and fleece pullovers.

It's time to switch out your blah winter wardrobe for bright spring dresses, shirts and pants. And it's time to think color, color, color—one of the top trends for men and women this season.

"It's been such a dreary winter for all of us," said Joe Zee, creative director at Elle magazine and star of the new Sundance channel show "All On The Line," which premieres this month (more at redeyechicago.com). "A piece of happy color when spring rolls around is great."

His advice for guys and gals this spring is to punch up outfits with colored accessories or, if you're daring, try head-to-toe striking color combos.

RedEye got the 411 on must-have essentials to keep fashion-forward Chicagoans looking fresh with these closet staples. LVIVANCO@TRIBUNE.COM

JIM MOORE, CREATIVE DIRECTOR AT GQ; JEN FORD, FASHION NEWS DIRECTOR AT LUCKY MAGAZINE; AND WENDY WALLACE, SENIOR MARKET EDITOR AT INSTYLE CONTRIBUTED THEIR ADVICE.

Floral dress or top or skirt

The look: Floral prints The prints range from pretty and romantic to exotic and bold, Wallace said. The latter effect occurs when floral prints are paired with dark colors. A floral dress is an obvious choice, but there are also more unexpected items in florals such as cardigans. And this trend is easy to pull off.

Kohl's, $60

Maxi dress

The look: '70s—sleek with smart tailoring. "It's very fun, but still practical," Ford said. Even a flared jean worn for casual Friday paired with a soft shirt or blouse completes the outfit. "What's great about the '70s is it's fun, sexy, happy clothes. The '70s was a good time," Wallace said. Not much is needed to give it a modern look: Pair oversized sunglasses with a long, flowy maxi dress.

Kohl's, $60

Sophisticated, simple dress

The look: Minimal, slightly conservative but still sexy. "It's very '90s but sort of what happened after grunge," Ford said. So channel someone like Gwyneth Paltrow from that era. The outfit should feel sophisticated and elegant. It's not va-va-voom. Picture a knee-length pencil skirt with a white blouse or a tailored dress in a soft fabric that glides over the body.

Theory, $275

Unstructured knit

The look: Metallic. It can be worn during the day and makes an easy transition to a night outfit, InStyle's Wendy Wallace said. Think more silver than gold. Metallic tops can be worn with white jeans. "It's super minimal. If you're going to wear something so shiny, keep your hair and makeup minimal," she said.

DKNY, $89

Bright-colored, boxy granny handbag

The look: Ladylike, a '50s feel. Consider tea-length dresses, full skirts that hit at the knee or a self-pleated skirt. "It's not like granny dressing. It's really fun," Ford said. Bare your arms, but don't have a low neckline. The look can be updated for spring simply with a handbag in an off-beat color.

Kate Spade, $395

Cotton suit

The look: It's not just about wool suits. "At this point, a guy should think of a cotton suit as a staple to his wardrobe," GQ's Jim Moore said. "It really is a great investment." It's a suit that can be worn casually, to work and into evening. Styles are popping up in black, navy and pinstripe, he said. And it can stand up to dressy shirts and silk ties. Plus, cotton is cooler than wool and is less expensive.

Hugo Boss, $895

Colored chinos

The look: This works for the guy who loves jeans and the guy who loves khakis. Colored chinos have a completely different attitude than high-waisted khakis, Moore said. The fit is slim and low-rise. They're available in black, olive green, red, yellow and blue—for guys who are daring enough to try them. "It might be stepping a little out of their comfort zone," he said. Men can neutralize the colored bottoms with a simple shirt. Guys can roll up the cuffs and wear them with canvas sneakers, boat shoes or loafers.

Dockers, $75

Belt

The look: For years, style experts loved a beltless, minimal look because of the streamlined look to skinnier suits and pants, Moore said. This is the chance for guys to accessorize themselves. Pick up a leather woven belt, colored leather belt, roped belt or a striped ribbon belt. "Sometimes the belt will be the thing that decides how the look will go together," he said. And it doesn't have to match your shoes."

Levi's, $39.50

Tassel earrings

The look: Maximal. "It kind of has a disco feeling to it," Ford said, like the New York club Studio 54 of the '70s and '80s. An outfit in this style could include an animal print, lace top, full skirt or shiny tank top. Or just add tassel earrings to any sleek dress, carry a glamorous clutch purse and wear high heels. "It's not about layering everything on in your wardrobe," Ford said. A good rule, she said, is take two clothing elements and add sparkle with accessories or other pieces.

Forever 21, $5.80

Lace top

The look: It's pretty, romantic and Victorian but with a modern twist, Wallace said. "The trick is to avoid color—only black, nude, white, super neutral," she said. It can even be worn to work if you have a cardigan or blazer over it.

Loft, $79.50

Plaid tie

The look: People often think of plaid as a fall fabric, but a cotton plaid tie is a must-have this spring, Moore said. The plaid tie was just for garden parties or horse races a couple of years ago, but this season, there are many that pair nicely with dressy suits. A deep colored plaid tie can freshen a gray suit. In cotton, it tends to be less expensive than a silk tie.

David Hart & Co., $115

Loafers

The look: The shoes used to be overly preppy, but they're now considered more versatile. Loafers are narrower and have less of a rounded toe, giving them a dressy look, Moore said. Before, the shoes seemed too chunky to be worn with a suit, but not anymore. "It looks great with a business suit but you can wear them with a pair of dark jeans or a pair of slim khakis," he said. Socks are optional. Just be sure to leave the pennies out. Kenneth Cole, $168

Door-biker collisions a rising concern

Chicago Tribune

Traffic laws recently were strengthened in Illinois to create safety buffers for bicyclists who share streets with drivers, but state transportation officials are rejecting pleas from cycling advocates to keep records on what they consider the most common type of vehicle-bike accident.

It involves, surprisingly, vehicles that are not moving.

That's one of the reasons the Illinois Department of Transportation said it does not track accidents in which a vehicle door is flung open in the path of a bicyclist, even though serious injuries and at least one fatality have occurred in the past several years as the result of bicyclists being "doored."

Kim Nishimoto, whose son was killed in a dooring accident, said she thinks IDOT's position that a vehicle must be in motion for a crash to be tallied is a mistake and a disgrace. Her son, Clinton Miceli, died June 9, 2008, after an SUV driver's door was opened on North LaSalle Street. Miceli, 22, couldn't avoid striking the door, and he fell off his bike and was run over by a passing vehicle, according to police.

NO FUNDS EN ROUTE

Informal surveys the Chicago Active Transportation Alliance has conducted among its members indicate that more than half the people who bike on streets have been doored at least once, said Ethan Spotts, spokesman for the organization. But lacking solid statistics, bicycling advocates say they can neither prove a problem exists nor apply for federal and state traffic-safety funds to address it, he said.

"I had a son who had just graduated from the University of Illinois and was a brilliant graphic artist, and his death doesn't count for anything, according to the state of Illinois," Nishimoto said. "That's just not appropriate. It's an insult."

As spring approaches, the Active Transportation Alliance, which is involved in efforts to make streets safer for bicyclists, pedestrians and motorists in the Chicago region, is launching a campaign to increase public awareness about dooring crashes. The group considers doorings the most prevalent threat to on-street cyclists.

Kim Nishimoto stands with a memorial to her son, Clinton Miceli, who died in a bike accident on North LaSalle Street after being doored by a driver exiting his car. CHRIS WALKER/TRIBUNE

Crashes slow LSD traffic

A fire truck leaves the scene of an accident Sunday on Lake Shore Drive at Chicago Avenue. No one was injured in the crash, police said. HEATHER CHARLES/TRIBUNE

Chicago Tribune

Authorities temporarily shut down southbound Lake Shore Drive on Sunday afternoon after two traffic accidents occurred within a block of one another, officials said.

The initial pin-in accident occurred near Walton Street about 2:13 p.m., fire department spokesman Richard Rosado said. About 20 minutes later, the second crash occurred at Chicago Avenue.

Four people were injured in the earlier accident. Three of the victims were taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital in good condition, while a single victim was taken there in serious-to-critical condition, Rosado said.

In the second crash, a 2006 BMW traveling south on outer Lake Shore Drive was struck as it made an illegal left turn, police spokesman Officer John Mirabelli said. Neither the 44-year-old woman driving the BMW, nor the husband and wife inside the striking car, a 2000 Audi, was injured in the collision, Mirabelli said.

The BMW's driver was cited for making an illegal turn.

Wyclef Jean has been an outspoken proponent of Haiti through his Yele Haiti Foundation and was one of the first celebrities to offer aid after the last year's devastating earthquake. In September, he officially ended his bid to be president of Haiti a month after election officials ruled that he was ineligible to run.

Singer Wyclef Jean (shown in an image from last week) was shot in the hand while in Haiti.

Wyclef OK after shooting

1 PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti Hip-hop singer Wyclef Jean was recovering Sunday after he was shot in the hand in Haiti, his publicist said.

Spokeswoman Cindy Tanenbaum said Jean was shot in Port-au-Prince on Saturday—on the eve of the country's presidential runoff vote.

The wound was superficial and “he is doing well,” Tanenbaum said.

Jean suffered the wound soon after stepping out of his car to talk on his phone, according to Gerry Andre, his spokesman in Haiti.

“He heard a gunshot, then he saw his right-hand palm was bleeding,” Andre said.

Jean was treated a hospital and released, Tanenbaum said.

Andre said it was not clear if Jean was a target of the shooting.

“I cannot accuse anybody,” Andre said.

The police investigation was stalled by Jean's refusal to speak to police about the incident, according to Garry Desrosiers, a spokesman for the Haitian national police.

Jean has been helping the presidential campaign of popular musician Michel Martelly, who is on the ballot against former first lady Mirlande Manigat in Sunday's pivotal presidential runoff election.

“It was nothing,” said Damien Merlo, a spokesman for the Martelly campaign. “He's fine and out and about getting out the vote for us.”

Final results of the runoff will be released April 16, according to officials.

Rescue provides some hope in Japan

2 ISHINOMAKI, Japan A grandmother and her teenage grandson were rescued Sunday in Japan, nine days after they became trapped in their home following the earthquake and tsunami, officials said.

In the southern part of the Miyagi city of Ishinomaki, the 80-year-old woman and 16-year-old boy were rescued by medical workers, authorities said.

Police were searching for survivors in the vicinity when the boy managed to crawl through the rubble onto the roof, the Ishinomaki police department said. The news gave hope to some that their missing loved ones may be found alive.

But for many Japanese people, the search now is not for survivors—it is for the bodies of their loved ones. In the town of Otsuchi, Keiko Chiba pointed to where she believes her husband's body may be. Even if he survived the tsunami, she says, a resulting gas explosion that burned through the town likely killed him.

Meanwhile, workers began to see some success in their battle to cool down reactors at the quake-damaged Fukushima Daiichi nuclear plant Sunday. Japanese officials said they may need to release additional radioactive gas into the air.

KANSAS 73, ILLINOIS 59

NOT SO BIG TEN

Illinois, Michigan, Purdue denied storybook ending

Chicago Tribune

TULSA, Okla. Their meeting was quick and cordial.

Illinois coach Bruce Weber went over to Kansas coach Bill Self before the game Sunday and extended his hand. Self, who preceded Weber at Illinois, reciprocated and patted Weber on the shoulder.

That was that.

There was, after all, a Southwest Region game to play between the No. 9 seed Illini and top-seeded Jayhawks.

And though the Illini stuck around, the speed and athleticism of the Jayhawks proved too much as Kansas ended Illinois' season with a 73-59 victory.

For the Illini (20-14), the game was about them against Kansas (34-2), not about Self against Weber. As senior Bill Cole said Saturday, if the Illini made some jilted fans feel avenged with a victory, so be it.

This season, the Illini were a team that lacked consistent effort. There was no problem with that Sunday.

They were a team that lacked toughness. In a hostile environment, the Illini prevented an early deficit from avalanching into a blowout and hung around, hoping for a breakthrough.

But ultimately, Illinois was a team that was going to go only as far as its point guard and leading scorer Demetri McCamey was going to take them.

On Sunday, McCamey closed his Illini career with just six points on 2-for-9 shooting, and he had four turnovers to go with seven assists.

Kansas' Tyshawn Taylor grounded McCamey to the core. Nothing worked for him. No step-back moves, no penetration. The door was always shut.

Despite the dominance of Markieff and Marcus Morris of Kansas in the post—the twins combined for 41 of the Jayhawks' 73 points—the Illini needed just one spark to close a narrow second-half deficit.

The Illini were within 56-51 with 6:35 remaining. As desperately as he tried, McCamey could not give it to them. The Jayhawks then pulled away with a 10-0 run.

In the first half, it seemed as though there wouldn't be much suspense at all. Kansas raced out to an 18-6 lead and the pro-Jayhawks crowd inside seemed ready to rush Illinois out of the building.

VCU 94, PURDUE 76

When Purdue coach Matt Painter watched tape of VCU, he saw two different teams.

There was the group that went 3-5 in February and was deemed unworthy of an NCAA Tournament bid by most bracketologists.

And there was the one that eviscerated Purdue's defense Sunday night, earning a trip to the Sweet 16 with a 94-76 whitewash.

"I watched a 4-5 game stretch and made an honest statement: VCU can beat anyone in the country on a neutral court," Painter said. "I was hoping that team from VCU would not show up."

To put the mauling into perspective, consider that Purdue had allowed more than 70 points just three times in 33 games. The Boilermakers entered seventh in the nation in adjusted defensive efficiency, according to kenpom.com, holding opponents to 40.9 percent shooting.

Then came a three-minute stretch early in the second half when VCU turned the game into a layup line.

The Rams' shot chart from that stretch looked like a smudge, with six baskets made within spitting distance of the rim.

"They exposed us," Painter said regarding his team's flawed defense against VCU's pick-and-roll. "It happened four straight times to three different guys."

Said E'Twaun Moore: "It was a basic thing of not rotating to the ball. We let them pick us apart."

VCU, a school of 32,000 students with a main campus located in Richmond, Va., advances to San Antonio to face Florida State.

"It feels great," VCU guard Joey Rodriguez said, "but we're not satisfied. We've got a lot more to do." TRIBUNE

DUKE 73, MICHIGAN 71

CHARLOTTE, N.C. Nolan Smith finished with a game-high 24 points as Duke held off a late Michigan surge, topping the Wolverines 73-71 to reach the Sweet 16.

"Nolan is so explosive and so good off the dribble," Michigan coach John Beilein said. "He has that one-on-one ability. You can play great team defense and he was so good."

Kyle Singler scored 13 points with eight rebounds for the top-seeded Blue Devils (32-4), who will face Arizona in the next round. Ryan Kelly and Kyrie Irving each finished with 11 points in the victory.

"They just played great," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski, who recorded his 900th career victory, said of his team. "We were able to make a couple plays, one offensively and one defensively to win. And I'm proud of our guys." SPORTS NETWORK

1 How's your bracket holding up?	Not so hot. Who would think Morehead could be such a bad thing?	I'd like to dedicate this week's answers to Eliud Serrano Sr., my dad ...	Looks about as promising as Bruce Pearl's future with Tennessee.	Like Lake Shore Drive during the blizzard. And no rescue in sight.	That's funny. That's exactly what I was going to ask you. Hahaha!
2 What has been the biggest surprise of the NCAA Tournament?	Either the Louisville bounce or the fact that I've had pants on for 80 percent of the games.	... who passed away last Monday.	The entire BYU team hasn't been suspended for "dancing."	That no one took over the tourney like the referees. Tim Donaghy, is that you?	That people still consider Butler an underdog.
3 Northwestern is in the NIT quarterfinals. Congratulate them.	Hey! You guys ... um, did it. Or something. Prooooooud of youuuu (being mediocre).	He helped me become the man—and the geek—that I am today.	Congrats, you're the hottest chick in the Snooki look-alike contest.	Winning in the NIT is a bigger accomplishment than losing on a one-end-zone baseball field. Congrats.	One day you too might be able to mess up someone's real tourney bracket. Not this year.
4 What does Matt Thornton need to know about being the White Sox's closer?	That he shouldn't throw up and in to Jim Thome. Other than that, let's gooooo.	He was a good man who will be missed by his wife and children.	As long as he doesn't grow a Jenks-style "chin in a box," he should be fine.	Avoid Oney Guillen's Twitter page if you blow a save.	Enjoy looking over your shoulder every time you blow one. Chris Sale will be standing there.
5 Barry Bonds' trial begins Monday. What do you expect?	To listen to Kanye's "Graduation" on repeat tomorrow: "We outta here baby ..."	I love you, Dad.	Exhibits A-E: Photos of back-ne.	I expect to intentionally walk away from the coverage. Only thing worse than NFL lockout talk is steroids talk.	Hard to tell, but I do know he easily wins the Jerk Athletes tournament.

Jake Peavy is suffering from tendinitis in the rotator cuff of his right shoulder that could put his Thursday start against the Cubs and his April 6 start in question. Peavy said he has felt gradual discomfort since his first start March 4 against the L.A. Angels.

Back to Booze

Look out, Sacramento—injured Bulls star might be ready to rock

If Carlos Boozer wakes up Monday with no negative reaction to practicing Sunday, he will return from missing five games with a sprained left ankle as the Bulls try to win their 13th straight home game, against Sacramento.

"We need him," Derrick Rose said. "We can get back to our old things—passing to the post, playing inside-out, pick-and-roll, dropping it off to him and him finishing."

Then again, Boozer hadn't done much finishing in his previous seven games before the March 9 injury, averaging 12.7 points on just 12.3 shots. But coach Tom Thibodeau downplayed a question about Boozer's lack of lift and explosiveness.

"He was getting more attention in the post, double-teams and people dropping down on to him," Thibodeau said. "We have to find different ways to get him a second look."

Boozer downplayed the same issue and said he's eager to return because taking pressure off his teammates is exactly what he provides.

"I feel good," Boozer said. "I'm just making sure it's right. The pain is still there. You don't want to be stupid and come back too soon and have a nagging injury. At the same time, I'd like to go. I'm looking forward to playing. My ankle is feeling better every day."

BULLS ADD PARGO, LUCAS III

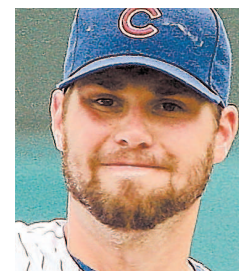

The Bulls signed Janner Pargo and John Lucas III on Sunday. The signings are for practice bodies, injury insurance and to create financial flexibility near the NBA draft in June. With team options for next season, they essentially would be expiring contracts that could be used as cap filler in a larger deal.

The NCAA has banned Butler's Blue II bulldog from appearing at the Bulldogs' regional game against Wisconsin on Thursday because the NCAA has banned live mascots. Yet it still allows Duke's Dick Vitale to travel with the team.

WHY SO SERIOUS?

Jake Peavy's attempt to come back sooner than expected from a detached latissimus dorsi muscle near his right shoulder was a good story this spring. He's had a setback, which is too bad, but leave it to Sox manager Ozzie Guillen to turn it all ugly. "Jake Peavy will pitch the day I tell him to pitch," Guillen said. In midseason form, I see.

Wanna get dirty?

We've got you covered—in mud, paint and maybe even a little blood

By Samantha Nelson

Sure, there's plenty of good, clean fun to be found in Chicago. But for those with stomachs of steel and a taste for distaste, the opportunities for a guaranteed blast extend even further. From seeing the body from the inside out at the newest Body Worlds exhibit to getting splashed with mud on purpose, these gross-out goings-on are not to be missed.

Dayglow Chicago: Escape Reality Tour 2011

Billed as the world's largest paint party, Dayglow bashes mix live music, DJs, aerial acts, stilt walkers, dance performances and, of course, plenty of paint. At midnight, cannons blast multicolored paint onto the crowd, and attendees are given 16-ounce squeeze bottles of black light-reactive paint to douse each other in green, orange and pink. "We recommend you wear something that you would be prepared to throw away," said Eric Fuller, event director.

Where: Congress Theater, 2135 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-276-1235

When: 10 p.m.-3 a.m. April 9

Cost: $26.50-$58.30

Body Worlds & the Cycle of Life

Back for its third installment, the traveling museum exhibit showcases 20 bodies and more than 200 preserved specimens, including organs, bones and embryos. Expect some displays to be more disturbing than disgusting—including one of a man with a "suit" of his skin draped over an arm and another of a figure hoisting up his internal organs. A display of smokers' lungs shows the long-term effects of emphysema, with blackened and holey tissue.

Where: Museum of Science and Industry, 5700 S. Lake Shore Drive 773-684-1414

When: 9:30 a.m.-5:30 p.m. daily through April 24; 9:30 a.m.-4 p.m. daily, April 25-Sept. 5

Cost: $18-$27, includes general admission

Vienna Beef factory tour

Who wants to see how their hot dog is made? Judging by the tours usually booked months in advance at the Vienna Beef factory, a lot of hot dog lovers. "People think that it's this thing that you just don't want to observe, but it's not," said Tom Pierce, vice president of customer services. "Everything's stainless steel and squeaky clean." Small groups can walk through the plant, set up as an oversized kitchen with stations for cutting, mixing and stuffing. Tour-goers stand just a few feet away from the products to get the full experience of the factory.

Worm Composting 101

What begins as a seemingly clean evening of nature education—with a snack of apples, bananas and tea while listening to a primer on the ABCs of worm composting—turns into a hands-on evening of waste and wiggly worms. Visitors use the garbage from their snack for starter food in their compost bin. Using a microscope, they then examine the red wiggler worms and mites in shoebox-sized bins as they turn refuse into fertilizer.

Where: The Peggy Notebaert Nature Museum, 2430 N. Cannon Drive, 773-755-5100

When: 6:30-8 p.m. Wednesday

Cost: $15

Butchery demo

After hosting a popular series of butchery demonstrations during his tenure at the now-shuttered restaurant Mado, Rob Levitt plans to restart the demos at Butcher & Larder, his new Noble Square butcher shop, in April. Classes typically have room for 12-15 people and run close to 90 minutes, with plenty of opportunities to ask questions and take pictures and videos. Beginning the demo with half a pig laid out on a table, Levitt goes through the process to break down the hog. "One of the things we like to teach people is that it's not a very bloody, sloppy process," Levitt said. "It's very surgical."

Where: The Butcher & Larder, 1026 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-687-8280

When: April

Mud Queens of Chicago mud wrestling

Mud Queens of Chicago mud wrestling

How can city-dwellers let loose and lighten up a little? With mud pits, of course. "It's just about having a good time, getting dirty and having nonpretentious fun," said Meg Bell, founder of Mud Queens of Chicago. Ladies of all shapes, sizes and walks of life invent alter-egos and brawl on a 4-foot-tall stage. Gather around the stage with the rest of the crowd and it's likely you'll get splashed with a little debris from the mud pit.

Where: The Viaduct Theater, 3111 N. Western Ave., 773-296-6024

When: 8 p.m. Monday

COSTUME PARTY!

Thor was there. (Actually, that was actor Chris Hemsworth, who will play the god of thunder in the summer blockbuster.) So were TV actors, comic book insiders, gamers and all things geek. When it was all over Sunday, organizers estimated 34,000 people attended the second annual Chicago Comic & Entertainment Expo at McCormick Place, up from 27,500 last year. But forget the hired talent—many costumed attendees themselves were the stars of the three-day C2E2. This year's costumed fun gave us the Joker chatting with Batman, a kid wearing Thor pajamas and more "Star Wars" characters than you could shake a lightsaber at. Here are some of our favorite costumes. REDEYE

Aries

March 21-April 19

You thought you could get away with it, but you can't. Your current squeeze is figuring out that you're sending sext messages to a former flame. Deception of some sort is catching up with you. Mars says you deserve to suffer.

Taurus April 20-May 20

You usually date men, but now you want to date women. A moon opposition has you questioning the fundamentals of your life. What if you're really a "summer" when for years you thought you were a "spring?"

Gemini May 21-June 21

Mercury going retrograde is decreasing your sexual mojo. When you call up flirtatious friends to schedule a hookup, they pretend they don't know you. Sucks to be you.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Venus is putting you in the fantasy zone. You're wondering if Brad and Angelina will ever break up so you can date one—or both—of them.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

You demand instant gratification. The sun is turning you into a selfish witch, so the only people willing to spend time with you are those who enjoy being dominated.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Just when you thought you and that sexy someone were about to get something going, things are held up. You can blame retrograde Mercury. It's OK. Use this time to hit the gym or get jogging or biking again and unveil that perfect bod in a few weeks.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Neptune has you contemplating unrealistic sexual scenarios. No, your wife isn't going to be happy when you announce you want a polyamorous relationship and suggest that an extra girlfriend move in with you.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Your honey is acting clingy and needy, which you hate. It's OK for you to demand constant adoration, but not for your boyfriend or girlfriend. Mercury says try being more understanding—just this once.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

An intense sun is increasing your sex drive, and your current lover might not be able to take care of you properly. Two choices: porn or an outside relationship. Choose wisely, as the path you take will have long-term implications.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

A practical moon has you making a checklist of your honey's every flaw. You'll have to figure out over the next few weeks if these things are fixable.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

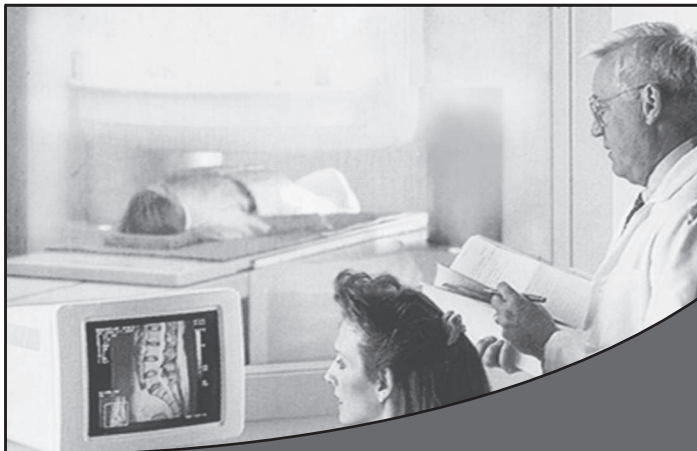

You're basking in the afterglow of some romantic improvements, thanks to Venus. You hooked up with somebody fabulous, and this person still is hanging around. Or you and a spouse have reintroduced mad passion into your marriage. Good for you.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

Mars has you taking action in every area of your life that has been a disaster. You've kicked out the useless roommate, quit the dead-end job and/or moved out of that bug-ridden downer of an apartment. Dare we say— time to focus on your non-existent love life?

Do you have a hot tip on a celebrity sighting in Chicago? E-mail Luis or tweet him @luisarroyave.

'Double' trouble

Admit it: Good Charlotte just lived out one of your childhood dreams.

In their new music video for "Last Night," the rockers face off on the set of the classic Nickelodeon game show "Family Double Dare." And yes, host Marc Summers even makes a cameo in the funnyordie.com video.

"Everyone's fantasy as a kid was to be on 'Double Dare,'" Good Charlotte's Benji Madden said Tuesday before DJing at Rockit Bar & Grill in River North. "It really felt like we were on one of the episodes. It was a blast. We gave funnyordie.com complete control, and they really hooked it up."

In the video, the band faces off against a family in typical "Double Dare" challenges involving pies, water balloons, slides and monkey bars. Each band member sported a wig and stone-washed jeans for the shoot.

Would Madden call "Last Night" his favorite Good Charlotte video?

"It's one of my favorite videos," he said. "'Hold on' was one of the most important videos because we reached out to a lot of kids. I really liked 'Girls & Boys' and 'The Anthem' videos. It was a special time in our career. We survived a certain music era and were able to stay current. ['Last Night'] reminds everyone that Good Charlotte doesn't take itself too seriously."

Golden lasso? Check. Indestructible bracelets? Check. Skin-tight shorts? Not so much. The "Wonder Woman" TV reboot will feature a less skimpy costume for the Amazon superheroine, who will be played by Adrienne Palicki. The garb has the approval of the original Wonder Woman, Lynda Carter. "What's not to like? Adrienne looks gorgeous and I'm really looking forward to seeing David E. Kelley's new series," Carter told thr.com.

It was a good news-bad news weekend for Bradley Cooper. At the same time his movie "Limitless" reached No. 1, news hit that Cooper and Renee Zellweger have broken up. People.com reported the split, saying speculation over the couple's demise began at the Oscars, where they appeared distant at a party.
